A NEW DEPARTURE!
BEST PLOW IN THE WORLD!

THE SYRACUSE CHILLED PLOW CO.
of Syracuse, N. Y.
Are now putting on the market a Plow that is as much superior to any Plow heretofore made as the Plows of the past few years have been superior to those made half a century ago.
It combines all the excellencies of any Plow in use.
It obviates all the objections made to any other Plow.
In addition it embraces several new features of the greatest value, for which we have obtained exclusive Patents.
Its Beam, Clevis, Jointer Standard and Wheel Standard will be STEEL, and its mold board will be a composition of steel and Iron chilled under a process for which we have also obtained an exclusive Patent. It will be called
THE SYRACUSE CHILLED STEEL PLOW
Its weight will be eighteen pounds less than our present styles.
A first-class Steel Plow, made in the ordinary way, full rigged, retails for twenty-two dollars. Interior Steel Plows retail from sixteen to nineteen dollars.
The price of our new Plow will be but Seventeen Dollars, and it will be the cheapest Agricultural Implement ever sold.
Its mold board will outwear three of the very best kinds of the ordinary steel mold boards.
It will scour in soils where all steel plows and all other plows have hitherto proved a failure.
With this Plow will be introduced a corrugated Plow Point and Jointer Point, on which we have also obtained a Patent, and which is also a great improvement, both as regards strength and wear.
The Jointer can be shifted so as to take more or less land, and also more or less pitch, and it can always be kept on a line with the Plow.
The wheel will run under the beam or one side of it as desired, and always kept in line.
The beam is adjustable for Spring or Fall Plowing, and also for two or three horses.
The handles can be adjusted to accommodate a man or boy, on the same Plow.
It is a perfect Plow.
Wooden beams are going out of use because they shrink, swell and warp, and never run two seasons alike.
Iron beams are too heavy.
Malleable beams become demoralized and bend, action is much worse than to break.
A Steel beam is the preserved medium. It is three times as strong and very much lighter than any other style.
When we say a Mold board is chilled, the farmers know it is so.
We do not palm off on them a composition of various metals and call it chilled metal.
We want agents for this new Plow in every town in this State.
We can give but a very small discount to them, but we will pay the Railroad Freight.
We propose to place this Plow in the hands of Farmers as near the cost of manufacture as possible.
It will be the best Agricultural Implement ever sold.
It shall also be the cheapest.
Persons therefore who are not willing to act as agents on the principle that "a nimble sixpence is better than a slow shilling," need not apply for an agency.
No Plows on commission. All sales absolute.
☞ This is the only Steel Chilled Plow in the World.
Steel costs several times more than Iron.
But this Plow, full rigged, by giving small discounts, can be sold for seventeen Dollars. Compare this price with that of any Iron Plow ever made.
It is cheaper than any other Plow now made would be at five dollars and a half.
Where there are no agents we will, on receipt of Seventeen Dollars, send a Plow to any Railroad station in the State and pay the freight. Address,
SYRACUSE CHILLED PLOW CO.

Poetical.

LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS.

"In Eastern lands they talk in flowers,
And they tell in a garland their love and cares
Each flower that blooms in their garden bowers
On its leaves a mystic language bears."
—Poetical.

The pretty red rose is an emblem of "love;"
The snowball, "thoughts of Heaven" above;
The honeysuckle implies "I dream of thee,"
And rosemary, always, "remember me."

Aloe vitæ denotes "unchanging friendship;"
"My only hope," the American cowslip;
"Declare your love," says the tulip tree,
And juniper replies, "I live for thee!"

Gladiola tells of "love at first sight;"
Sweet pea says "Meet me by moonlight;"
Dead leaves indicate "a heavy heart;"
Variegated pink, "Forever we part."

"Let us part friends," says the trumpet flower,
Primrose answers, "Your friend for an hour."
Plum says, "Keep your word,"
And rose geranium, "Thou art preferred."

Apple blooms asks, "Will thou be mine?"
Peach bloom replies "My heart is thine."
The dandelion is "a gay coquette;"
And "modesty" dwells with the white violet.

Sweet William says, "Let our friendship end;"
Snowdrop sighs softly, "I'm not a summer friend."

Balloon vine proposes to "Kiss and make up,"
But "ingratitude" dwells in the bright buttercup."

"I surmount difficulties," is the intellect's song
Woodbine's chorus. "I have loved thee long."
The lilac thrills with "love's first emotion,"
And heliotrope implies only "devotion."

Petunia says, "Your presence soothes me;"
Ice plant replies, "Your looks freeze me;"
White rose whispers, "My heart is free,"
And white clover, over "think of me."

Sensitive rose, like a pretty coquett,
Says, "Too young to leave my mother yet;"
"Mine through sunshine, storm and snows,"
Is written all over the perpetual rose.

Blue iris brings "a message to you,"
Forget-me-not denotes "love" tender and true,
Blue violet "faithfulness;" hare bell "grief;"
And passion flower happy in "religious belief."

"Our souls are one," says the beautiful phlox;
"Constancy" abides with pretty dwarf box.
Of "Love in a cottage" Portulaca doth tell,
And "gratitude" is found in the Canterberry bell.

"Bonds" is expressed by the blue morning glory;
"Nobility of character" by magnolia grandi Flora.
The aramanth denotes "unfading love,"
And "inchcerity" blights the pretty fox-glove

"True friendship" is found in the Virginia stock
"Ambition" sits high on the bright hollyhock.
"Compassion" attends the bleeding heart;
And Scarlet pea asks "Must you depart?"

We find "fascination" always in fern,
"Sympathy" in balm and "life" in lucerne.
Then gather a wreath from the garden bowers
And tell the wish of thy heart in flowers.

General Winfield Scott Hancock.

Democratic Candidate for President.

HIS ARMY SERVICE OF 36 YEARS AND HIS RECORD AS A CHAMPION OF CIVIL LAW —HOW, AS A HARD FIGHTING GENERAL, HE BECAME A SHIELD FOR HIS NATIVE STATE—PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS.

Few men have served their country better than Winfield S. Hancock and few deserve more from their countrymen. A big man, with a big head, a big heart and a big brain, Hancock is the personification of honor, honesty and capacity. Gallant and unassuming, a soldier in three wars, the hero of a hundred battles, he is a man on whom all Democrats can consistently unite for President, and who as a candidate, will perhaps command a larger degree of respect and support from Republicans than any other man in the Democratic party. Clear-headed and self reliant, his career as a judicial statesmen and Military Governor while in command of Louisiana and Texas gives evidence that, if a strong man is needed for President, there is no man in the nation more for that position than Winfield S. Hancock. With him as the candidate of their party the Democrats have nothing to explain or defend, and can proudly point to his record and challenge a comparison of it with that of the Republican candidate. The people of this country will not soon forget there was a day in its history when, if General Hancock had not shown the highest capacity as a military commander, there might be no Republic to govern. It was on that day when the gallant General Reynolds fell at Gettysburg and Lee's forces were driving back the Union Army. Like a thunderbolt Hancock precipitated his troops upon the victorious enemy, hurled them back, and seizing Cemetery Heights and Round Top wrested order from confusion and restored confidence to our half beaten army.

A YOUNG PENNSYLVANIAN.

Winfield Scott Hancock was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1824, and is therefore fifty-six years of age. His mother's father was a Revolutionary soldier and was captured at sea and confined in the Dartmoor prison, England. His great-grandfather on his mother's side was also a soldier under Washington and rendered good service, dying at the close of the Revolution from exposure and hardships endured in the field. Hancock's father served in the War of 1812 and afterwards became a lawyer of distinction in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania. At the age of sixteen, Hancock was sent to West Point and had for class mates U. S. Grant, George B. McClellan, J. F. Reynolds, J. L. Reno, Burnside, Franklin and W. F. Smith. He graduated in 1844, June 30, and in 1845-6 served with his regiment in the Indian Territory as a second lieutenant of the Sixth Infantry. In '47 we find him in Mexico and conspicuous, for gallantry at Natural Bridge, San Antonio, Contreras, Cherubusco, Molino del Rey and the capture of the City of Mexico. He was breveted for gallantry at the battles of Contreras and Cherubusco. In 1849 and 1850 he served with his regiment as quartermaster and adjutant, and in the fall of 1850 was married at St. Louis to Miss Almira Russel, the daughter of a prominent merchant of that city. He took part in several Indian campaigns in the West, and in 1857 was engaged in the Southern Florida war. He served in the expedition against Utah and in 1859 went to California.

When he heard of the rebellion he took high ground in favor of the Union and did much in 1861 to check the secession spirit then seizing upon California. He applied to Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, for a commission in the volunteers, but the Governor being slow in replying to his application, he obtained a leave of absence and came East. His earnestness impressed Scott, who ordered him to report to General McClellan, and on the formal recommendation of McClellan President Lincoln, on the 23rd of September, 1861, commissioned Hancock a Brigadier General of Volunteers. He was assigned to a brigade in the division of General Baldy Smith and reported to duty at Chain Bridge, Virginia, in the Army of the Potomac.

HIS FIRST BATTLE.

His first battle in the rebellion was at Warwick Court House, near Yorktown, and he led his brigade in person, driving the enemy before him. At Williamsburg Hancock bore a conspicuous part. The rebels having repulsed Hooker and exposed Hancock's left flank he determined to retire and ordered the batteries back to the slope, where his brigade line stood. The rebel commander, seeing the movement, at once advanced his troops, and they came down on Hancock's right in two superb lines of battle, cheering tremendously and calling out, "Bull Run! Bull Run! That flag is ours." Hancock sat on his horse behind the centre of his line, waiting with imperturbable coolness the favorable moment. Calling on the men to stand fast and keep their pieces loaded, Hancock waited until the rebels were within 100 yards, then dashing forward on his horse, with head bared and swinging his hat, he shouted, "Forward! forward!" The men saw the towering form of their General leading them, and springing up, with a shout that made the hills ring, they precipitated themselves upon the enemy. The great, irregular mass of rebels faltered, halted for a moment, wavered and then fell back slowly. Every inch of ground was stubbornly contested; still, Hancock forced them off the field, nor did they again advance until the Union reinforcements came up and rendered the victory secure. It was almost night when Hancock repulsed the enemy, and no pursuit could be ordered in the darkness. The ground was covered with rebel dead and wounded and many were cut off and captured. The action of Hancock had rendered Williamsburg untenable, and that night the enemy abandoned it. Hancock's name was heralded from Maine to California, and in a few hours from an unknown subordinate, he had leaped into fame and assumed a national reputation. McClellan telegraphed the President "Hancock was superb to day," an expression which all who saw him towering above his men leading them to battle knew to be only just.

HIS SERVICES IN THE PENINSULA.

On the 27th of June, 1862, Hancock, who was then at Golding's Farm, in the Peninsula, received a severe attack from the enemy. He repulsed it and continued the fighting far into the night, the contending forces firing at each other at close quarters in the dark. This battle of Hancock's was one of the grandest spectacles of the war, and will never be forgotten by the Army of the Potomac. On the 28th of June, 1862, Hancock was heavily engaged at Garnett's Hill, as he was at Savage Station on the 29th and at White Oak Swamp on the 30th. His troops fought four battles in as many days, and in every one of them were led by Hancock in person. He never knew fear himself and could not tolerate it in others. An officer, who had his men in a tight place; rode up to the General and said: General, my men are all being killed; may I not withdraw them a little out of the fire?"

"No," replied Hancock, "I hope we shall be able to advance soon."

"Then we shall all be killed," despondingly replied the officer.

"Very well," said Hancock; "return to your troops, and if you fall you will have the satisfaction of knowing you have died for your country."

For his services in the Peninsula campaign General McClellan recommended Hancock for promotion to the rank of major general of volunteers and the brevets of major, lieutenant colonel and colonel in the regular army.

ALWAYS AT IT.

In September, 1862, Hancock commanded his brigade in the battle of South Mountain and afterwards at Antietam. In this latter engagement, when Gen. Richardson fell, Hancock was sent to take command of that gallant officer's division. In November, 1862, Hancock received his commission as major general, and on the 13th of December was engaged in the desperate and bloody assault on Marye's Heights. His behavior on this occasion was in keeping with the high reputation he had received. He was, with his division, in the thickest of the conflict, leading his men as far as it was possible, under the circumstances, for men to go, and only falling back when attempt at further advance was fool-hardy and useless. In this fight, as, in fact, in almost every one in which he was engaged, he seemed to wear a charm on his life. He received in the "slaughter pen," as the rank and file were wont to call the position they occupied in this fight, a slight flesh wound, coming out otherwise unharmed, though with uniform perforated with the enemy's bullets. In this battle Hancock lost one-half of his command, killed and wounded, and all his aides were wounded.

At Chancellorsville, in May, 1863, he commanded his division and covered the roads leading towards Fredericksburg, where amid surrounding disaster, although constantly attacked, his troops maintained their position to the last, and formed the rear guard of the army in moving off the field. The general had his horse shot under him in the battle. Early in June he relieved General Couch in command of the Second Corps, and later in the same month was assigned by Mr. Lincoln to be its permanent commander.

In one of his battles General Hancock placed one of his brigades in a certain position and said to its commander: "General, whatever happens, I want you to hold this ground." The brigade commander was never very strong on the battle field and on that occasion seemed to be particularly weak and anxious, and as the General turned to ride away to another part of the field he followed him a short distance and called out: "General, where are my reserves?" General Hancock turned and, riding up to where the officer was standing, said, severely. "General, it is none of your business where your reinforcements are; that is my business. I have placed you here to hold this ground; that is all you are required to do, and I want it done, sir." The officer returned to his line with a sad step and a sorrowful expression of countenance.

AT GETTYSBURG.

It was at Gettysburg Hancock again loomed up before the country as a hero. He was commanding the rear guard of the army in its advance on Gettysburg, and had reached Tarrytown, the place where his grandfather, one hundred years before, had started to escort one thousand Hessian prisoners of Burgoyne's army to Valley Forge, when General Meade sent him an order to hasten to the front and assume command of all the troops there. The report had reached Meade of the fall of General Reynolds and the check and repulse of the advance, and his mind at once turned to General Hancock as the man above all others best qualified to replace Reynolds and restore order to the head of the army. Hancock was not the ranking general, but in the critical state of affairs, Meade knowing him to be the best man, did not hesitate to assign him.

On his way from Tarrytown to the battle field General Hancock met the ambulance containing the dead body of Gen. Reynolds. When he arrived on the field he found the army in confusion and retreat had already begun. Planting some infantry and batteries on Seminary Hill he threw his whole energy into the battle and checked the enemy. Schwerin and Saxe were said to be worth each a reinforcement of 10,000 men to an army; Torstesin was rated as equal to 15,000 and the Duke of Wellington said the arrival of Napoleon on a battle field was a better reinforcement to the French army than the secession of 30,000 fresh troops. What then shall we say of the value of Gen. Hancock's arrival at the critical moment on the battle field of Gettysburg, a battle that by common consent is now admitted to have decided the fate of the Union and fixed the final result of the war.

Of General Hancock's individual action at Gettysburg it would require a volume to tell. His was really the action or the army, and Round Top, Culp's Hill and Seminary Heights were his creations. He sent word to Gen. Meade that that was the place to fight and seizing the favorable positions, with the eye of consumate general, hung on to them until Meade brought up the whole army and delivered his battle.

THE INCARNATION OF WAR.

Hancock was grand and magnificent in the battle of Gettysburg and seemed the very incarnation of war. The second day he was at Cemetery Heights during the frightful cannonade when the rebels concentrated fire of one hundred and fifty guns on our lines. The air was full of missiles; streams of shot and shell screamed and hissed everywhere; it seemed as though nothing could live under the terrible fire—men and horses were torn limb from limb; caissons exploded one after another in rapid succession, blowing the gunners to pieces. The infantry hugged the ground closely and sought every slight shelter that light earthworks afforded. It was literally a storm of shot and shell, like the fall of rain drops or the beat of hailstones. Those who had taken part in every battle of the war had never seen anything like that cannonade, and the oldest soldiers began to feel uneasy for the result. Hundreds and thousands were stricken down; the shrieks of animals and screams of wounded men were appalling; still the awful rushing sound of flying missiles went on and apparently never would cease. It was then when the firmest hearts had begun to quail, the army witnessed one of the grandest sights ever beheld by any army on the earth. Suddenly a band began to play "The Star Spangled Banner," and General Hancock, with his staff—Major Mitchell, Captain Bingham, Captain Parker, Captain Bronson—with corps flag flying in the hands of Private Wells, appeared on the right of his line uncovered and rode down the front of his men to the left. The soldiers held their breath, expecting every moment to see him fall from his horse pierced by a dozen bullets, but still he rode on, while the shot roared and crashed around him, every moment tearing great gaps in the ranks by his side.

Stormed at by shot and shell,
Boldly he rode, and well.

Every soldier felt his heart thrill as he witnessed the magnificent courage of his General, and he resolved to do something that day which would equal it in daring. Just as Hancock reached the left of his line the rebel batteries ceased to play, and their infantry, 18,000 strong, were seen emerging from the woods and advancing up the hill. Hancock knew the artillery fire had been intended to demoralize his men and cover the advance of their infantry, which was to make the real attack. Turning his horse he rode slowly up his line from left to right, holding his hat in his hand, bowing and smiling to the troops as they lay flat on the ground. Hardly had he reached the right of the line when the men, who, inspired by the courage of their General, could hardly restrain themselves, received orders to attack the advancing rebels. Eight guns which had concentrated opened their brazen mouths and streams of blue bullets flew from the muzzles of our rifles to the breasts of the confederates. It was an awful day, and Longstreet's "Old Guard of the South" melted away like wax under that terrible fire. Of the 18,000 who came to the attack, 5,000 fell or were captured on the hill side. Thirty stand of colors and an immense number of small arms were taken. Hancock was everywhere, riding the storm of battle as if he bore a charmed life. At last, just in the moment of victory, he was seen to reel from his saddle and would have fallen to the ground had he not been helped from his house. A ball had pierced his thigh, and for a time it was thought the wound was mortal.

"Tell General Meade," said Hancock, addressing his aide, Colonel Mitchell, "that the troops under my command have repulsed the enemy and gained a great victory. The enemy are now flying in all directions in my front."

When the aide delivered this message to General Meade and added his General was dangerously wounded, Meade said: "Say to General Hancock that I am sorry he is wounded and that I thank him for myself and for the country for the services he has rendered to-day."

General Meade afterwards, in commenting on the battle of Gettysburg, said to General R. C. Drum: "No commanding general ever had a better lieutenant than Hancock. He was always faithful and reliable."

UNDER GRANT.

Hancock did not recover from his wound until December, 1863, when, although still quite lame, he reported for duty, and was sent North to recruit his corps. He was tendered a reception at Independence Hall by the citizens of Philadelphia, and received the hospitalities of the cities of Boston, Albany and New York. In March, 1864, he rejoined his corps and participated in the battles of the Wilderness with Grant. He commanded the Second and parts of the Fifth and Sixth Corps, amounting in all to 50,000 men. He fought at Alsop's house, and at Spottsylvania court house, capturing "Stonewall" Jackson's old brigade, 40,000 prisoners and thirty colors. He was at North Anne, and did most of the fighting there. He commanded at the bloody assaults on Cold Harbor, and did his best to execute Grant's orders. The fighting was desperate and Hancock's loss could not have fallen far short of 12,000 He was on the south side of the James river, and made the assaults on Petersburg. He was with Sheridan, and attacked the enemy at Deep Bottom, taking four pieces of artillery, six hundred prisoners and three stand of colors. He was at Petersburg and witnessed the explosion of the mine on the morning of July 30. The advance up the James river, August 12, 1864, was under his command, and he handled the Second and Tenth Corps of the Army of the James and Gregg's division of cavalry with such consummate skill as to elicit expressions of admiration from even General Grant. He fought the battle of Reams' Station, Aug. 25, and had his horse shot under him. He fought the battle of Boydton road, capturing 1,000 prisoners and two stand of colors.

DEMOCRATIC CLUBS.

It is earnestly recommended that in all the townships of Columbia county the members of the Standing Committee, shall proceed to call together the Democrats, at some convenient place, and organize a club for the campaign; and Wednesday evening, July 7th, is suggested as the time, at the place of holding the election.

The several Committeemen are instructed to notify the chairman of the organization and the names of officers.

George A. Clark, Secretary. David Lowenberg, Chairman.

The Greenbackers are claiming that they will carry Texas next fall. If such a thing should occur she will indeed be the "Lone Star."

Enthusiastic Democratic meetings are being held all over the country to ratify the action of the Cincinnati convention. We do not hear so much about the ratification of the Chicago nomination. Our opponents seem to have given up the contest from the very start.

For years past Republicans have entered on Presidential campaigns with faces beaming with smiles, for they felt pretty certain of success. Now about all that is necessary to arouse their tempers is to mention Hancock's name. The certainty of what the fall election will bring forth does not set well on their stomachs.

The Democratic Party is told that Hancock cannot be elected because he is a Catholic (which is not true) and therefore Protestants will not vote for him. He hung Mrs. Surratt and therefore the Catholics will not vote for him. Before the campaign is over this bravest of patriot soldiers will be accused of cowardice and treason, so much stronger is the love of power than gratitude for enemies to the union.

Proceedings of the Convention in Brief.

CINCINNATTI, June 24—5:50 p. m.—The nomination of Hancock has carried everything by storm. Illinois cast her vote solid for him; New York voted for Randall and so did twenty-one of the Pennsylvania delegation amid hisses and cheers, but when the vote was about to be counted the States began to change, and with Kentucky solid for Hancock, he had over five hundred votes, then every delegation vied with the other in trying to be heard above the storm of cheers and the noise of enthusiasm to change their votes finally. Hay cast Pennsylvania solid for Hancock; Massachusetts, New York and every other State but Indiana, which stood loyally by Hendricks. A revised call showed seven hundred and one votes for Hancock. The cheers were resumed, and the Hancock banner with his portrait was brought down to the President's desk and waved, and the banners of the States came in to greet the next President. The scene which now took place and filled the next half hour cannot be described. The cheers echoed and re-echoed, ladies swung their handkerchiefs, flags and banners were waved, the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner" and the great organs joined the chorus. The restoration of order brought an Indiana delegate to the stand to make a motion for a unanimous vote. This was seconded by several States in five orations amid continued cheers. The motion was carried. Randall and Wallace came forward together and pledged the united vote and effort in Pennsylvania; Wade Hampton pledged South Carolina; Breckenridge, of Kentucky, pledged a solid South. By this time John Kelly, heading his party, came into the hall and took the platform. Tremendous cheering greeted him; he buried the hatchet, shook hands with Fellows, the leader of the regulars, and the united Democracy in New York was tremendously cheered. The committee on platform reported. It denounced the fraud of 1876 and the crimes which followed; favors retrenchment, gold and silver, and paper convertible in same; opposes discriminations in favor of monopolies and corporations. Chinese settlements of permanent character and foreign agression in America. It encourages labor, free commerce and tariff only for revenue. The platform was adopted without debate or a dissenting voice, and with great applause.

English, of Indiana, was nominated on the first ballot for Vice President. He has served in Congress. Dispatches were read from New York, Indiana and Galena, Ill., Grant's home, and other points, announcing the wildest enthusiasm over Hancock's nomination. Guns are firing all over the country; Cincinnati is ablaze with fervor. Republicans openly announce their adhesion to the ticket. Judge West, who ran for Governor on the Republican ticket against Bishop has come over with a large following. The ratifications will at once be held at all points.

AFTER THE NOMINATION.

General Hancock was at Governor's Island attending to official duties. When informed of his nomination he did not speak. Soon after, his wife held a reception at their pleasant home, of the wives of other officers on the Island. Congratulatory telegrams poured in from every quarter. Among them was the following:

"I congratulate you for your nomination for president and predict your election and complete restoration of peace to all sections.

Your life long friend,
JOHN W. FORNEY."

"I cannot tell a lie; the stock I had belonged to Colfax."—J. A. G.

Our Candidates.

A FEW EXPRESSIONS BY NEWSPAPERS OF ALL PARTIES,

I always know where to find Handcock. —[Grant in the wilderness.

You'll find him in the White oHuse after March 4, 1881.

Happy is it for the democratic party, fortunate is it for the people of the United States, that the delegates at Cincinnati made so wise a decision'—Washington Post (dem.)

The Philadelphia Chronicle Herald estimates that "the Surrat slander is making votes for Hancock at the rate of 10,000 a day, and the campaign has four months to run."

The original Garfield man is not as numerous now as he was ten days go. The original Hancock man is of more importance and there are many applicants for his situation. —Philadelphia Times.

In making up its White House gallery the Times struck three out of a possible four candidates—Hancock, Garfield and English all filled niches in that collection of statesmen. It was not supposed that the republican party would get as far down as Arthur. —Philadelphia Times.

It is the harbringer of victory. It unites and solidifies the American democracy, and nerves them for the autumnal struggle with a full assurance of success at the polls, and the profound conviction that neither force nor fraud will be able to wrest from the people the fruits of victory. The nomination is a wise one gauged by all the standards.—Pittsburg Post (dem.)

By the nomination of Winfield S. Hancock, a soldier of the republic and an irreproachable citizen, they have re-established some claim to political sagacity as well as to get en rapport with the best sentiment of the people.—Pittsburg Dispatch (rep.)

A brave and well tried soldier of the Union, General Hancock is at the same time a sincere and thorough believer in the democratic idea that civil government must always be superior to military authority, and that the people are infinately greater than the army, which they employ and pay.—N. Y. Sun (ind)

His imblemished character in private life, his high attainments, his social standing, fit him to grace the Presidential chair. His public acts as a brave and daring soldier in war, and as a considerate and liberty-loving soldier in time of peace justify the trust that has been reposed in him.—Philadelphia Record (ind)

Not since 1856, when the democracy of Pennsylvania under the lead of John W. Forney in this same city of Cincinnati nominated James Buchanan for the Presidency, and returned home resolved to elect him by every means known to human ingenuity and by every effort in the reach of human energy has there been an event which will so inspirit the party as the nomination of Hancock.—Philadelphia Press (rep.)

But the General among soldiers was the one named yesterday by the Cincinnati convention as the democratic nominee for the presidency—General Hancock.—Philadelphia Ledger (ind.)

This day has cast great shadows across the path of James A. Garfield. The nomination of Winfield Scott Hancock as his competitor for the highest civil trust of the world, by the spontaneous acclaim of a democracy, forecasts a contest that under even the most favorable circumstances for Garfield must be doubtful in its issue, and that gives more than even promise in its sweeping Hancock in every northern state. —Philadelphia Times editoral Telegram.

The republic can boast of no citizen whose private life, and whose public career have been more worthy as being held up as the purest and most praiseworthy types. Physically, mentally, morally General Hancock is one of the best of a class which happily is beginning to furnish many illustrious examples in the adornment of public affairs; and while we could esteem as nothing else than calamity the success of the Democratic party we must recognize from the beginning that its defeat in the coming campaign will find no promoting cause in any lack of personal deserving on the part of its most distinguished candidate for the Presidency. —North American (rep.)

His nomination appears to be the result of the deliberate choice of the convention, and he will undoubtedly make a strong candidate before the people. His public record is without blot and his private character is equally stainless. The democacy ought to have no apprehensions for the result of the election next November.—Wilmington Every Evening (ind.)

The Republican party is now put upon a purely defensive campaign, for its candidate has matters to explain, while Hancock has nothing. As the things now look the Democrats have the call, unless they shall commit most fatal acts of indiscretion during the campaign.—The Day, (rep.)

"This is a strong nomination—probably as strong as they could make." Mayor Stockley.

"It is a very popular nomination." Colonel Charles Thompson Jones.

"They could not possibly have made a stronger nomination." General A. H. Bingham.

"It looks to me as if they had a lucid interval—the first they have had since the war." Colonel M. S. Quay.

Garfield's adherents affect to believe that he possesses high qualities as a statesman yet they confess that he possesses so little discernment that he fell into the clumsy trap of Oakes Ames and is of such amazing simplicity that he accepted the De Golyer bribe in the belief that it was an attorney fee. There is another episode in the career of Garfield as a statesman to which his supporters are reluctant to refer. He was one of the visiting statesmen who went to New Orleans to encourage J. Madison Wells to wipe out a democratic majority of ten thousand votes in Louisiana. When this work was accomplished he returned to Washington and boasted of his share in it. He next had the effron tery to sit on the electoral commission as a judge when he had already prejudged the case as counsel for Mr. Hayes. When the fraudulent decision of the electoral commission was made he joined in the intrigue to quiet the title of Mr. Hayes with the consideration that the carpet-bag government of Packard in New Orleans should be abandoned by the federal troops and left to its fate. The aptness for intrigue and conspiracy which Garfield has developed in his career in congress is held up to the American people as proof of statesmanship. It is a kind of "statesmanship" that General Hancock is too proud and high-minded a man to learn.—Patriot.

When the news of Garfield's nomination was received at Galena, General Grant was in General Rawley's office receiving dispatches. All he said was, "It is all right—I am satisfied," and soon after went home. Home was the best place for him just then, too, for no doubt he felt sick at the stomach. —Ex.

The Platform.

The Democrats of the United States, in convention, declare:

First, We pledge ourselves anew to the constitutional doctrines and traditions of the Democratic party, as illustrated by the teachings and example of a long line of Democratic statesmen and patriots, and embodied in the platform of the national convention of the party.

Second, Opposition to centralizationism and to that dangerous spirit of encroachment which tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create whatever be the form of government, a real despotism. No sumptuary laws, separation of church and state for the good of each, common schools fostered and protected.

Third, Home rule, honest money; the strict maintenance of the public faith, consisting of gold, silver and paper convertible on demand; the strict maintenance of public faith—State and national—and a tariff for revenue only.

Fourth, The subordination of the military to the civil power, and a general and thorough form of civil service.

Fifth, The right to a free ballot is the right preservative of all the rights, and must and shall be maintained to every part of the United States.

Sixth, the existing administration is the representative of conspiracy only, and its claim of right to surround the ballot-boxes with troops and deputy marshals to intimidate and obstruct the elections, and the unprecedented use of the veto to maintain its corrupt and despotic power, insults the people and imperils their institutions.

Seventh, The great fraud of 1876-77, by which, upon a false count of the electoral votes of two states, the candidate defeated at the polls was declared to be President, and for the first time in American history the will of the people was set aside under a threat of military violence, struck a deadly blow at our system of representative government. The Democratic party, to preserve the country from the horrors of a civil war, submitted for the time in firm and patriotic faith that the people would punish this crime in 1880. This issue proceeds and dwarfs every other. It imposes a more sacred duty upon the people of the Union than ever addressed the consciences of a nation of freemen.

Eighth, We execrate the course of this administration in making places in the civil service a reward for political crime, and demand a reform by statue, which shall make it forever impossible for the defeated candidate to bribe his way to the seat of a usurper by billeting villians upon the people.

This was read again in response to demands, and was received with applause.

Ninth, the resolution of Samuel J. Tilden not again to be candidate for the exalted place to which he was exalted by a majority of his countrymen, and from which he was excluded by the leaders of the Republican party, is received by the Democrats of the United States with sensibility of his wisdom, patriotism and integrity, unshaken by the assaults of a common enemy, and they further assure him that he is followed into the retirement he has chosen for himself by the sympathy and respect of his fellow citizens, who regard him as one elevating the standards of public morality, and adorning and purifying the public services, merits the lasting gratitude of his country and his party.

Tenth, Free ships and a living chance for American commerce on the seas and on the land; no discrimination in favor of transportation lines, corporations or monopolies.

Eleventh, The amendment of the Burlingame treaty for more Chinese emmigration, except for travel, education and foreign commerce, and therein carefully guarded.

Twelfth, public money and public credit for public purposes solely, and public land for actual settlers.

Thirteenth, The Democratic party is the friend of labor and laboring men, and pledges itself to protect them alike against the cormorants and the commune.

Fourteenth, We congratulate the country upon the honesty and thrift of a Democratic Congress which has reduced the public expenditure $40,000,000 a year; upon the continuation of prosperity at home, and the national honor abroad; and above all, upon the promise of such a change in the administration of the governmen as shall insure us genuine reform in every department of the pualic service.

The platform was adopted unanimously.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. June 29th, 1880.

Notice is given that the few conservatives who hold places in the departments will be dismissed. Most of these gentlemen have been long in the service, have become familiar with the special work they are doing, and are estimable citizens. The argument now used in favor of proscription is that it is necessary to show that the Republican party stands by its friends, and is not afraid of its enemies. The idea has got abroad in some way that Mr. Hayes, on his advent to power, caused the appointment of quite a number of conservative gentlemen in all the departments. He did not. The conservative gentlemen now employed, and who are to be removed, are old in service and peculiarly well quilified for the performance of their duties. Their abilities are such that even the craze against everything but bitter radicalism, which dominated Grants first administration, failed to secure their removal. They go out under the civil service reform administration of Mr. Hayes.

In Washington there is but one opinion of the nomination of Hancock, and it is that no better could have been made. The simple truth is that it has healed every division in the Democratic party, and has brought and will bring many thousands of Republicans of the better class to its support. It was emphatically a people's nomination, not being arranged in advance in the interest of politicians, and such nominations are generally the strongest. As showing how little the "machine" had to do with Hancock's selection I give the statement, found in the Evening Star of this city, of an intelligent Washington gentleman who was at the Convention: "There is a secret of the Hancock boom in Cincinnati worth letting out. About five days before the nomination was made a score of Hancock's friends held a consultation at No. 177 Elm street, Hancocks headquarters. At this gathering it was urged that some money was needed for legitimate expenses; whereupon Senator Wallace, Blanton, Duncan, E John Ellis, Col. Joe. McKibbon and others chipped in and raised $757. After Hancock was nominated they met again to settle their bills. There was ten days rent of a room to be paid for at $50 per day, making $500. One hundred dollars was spent in printing, and another hundred for a streamer and transparencies. This was the sum total of the expenditures. In settling up their was $57 left, to be returned pro rata to subscribers. This $700 was the sum total expended in Hancocks behalf and the entire amount was raised after his friends reached Cincinnati.

HILTON.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

One of the strongest features of the republican party is its inconsistency. It has already made its appearance in the present campaign. Only a day after General Hancock was nominated they began to abuse him with his connection with the hanging of Mrs. Surratt, everybody knows the circumstances of that unfortunate affair.

The Philadelphia Times says of this:

"General Hancock was in command in the Valley when the country was thrown into excitement by the assassination of President Lincoln, and he was immediately summoned to Washington by President Johnson and assumed the military command at the capitol. It was in this way he was associated with the trial by the military court, and the subsequent execution, of the alleged conspirators, including Mrs. Surratt. Much interest had been exhibited in this part of his service, and the prominence of his position has, in the minds of some ignorant people, made his connection with the execution of the prisoners more intimate than is true. It must be remembered that he was in command of a force in and about the capitol of about 100,000 men, having, practically, only the Secretary of War and the President as his superiors. With the detail of the garding and the care of the prisoners he had nothing whatever to do. They were confined in the arsenal, and the commander there was General Hartranft, who took the position by order of the Secretary of war. A military commission, ordered by the President, tried by the prisoners, found them guilty, condemned some of them to and the findings of the military court were approved by the President. The execution had been ordered for the 8th day of July. On the 9th Messrs. Aiken and Clampitt, the counsel of Mrs. Surratt, went before the United States Justice Wylie and procured a writ of habeas corpus. This was served by the Marshal of the district on General Hancock as the head of the military division. As was his duty he forwarded it to his superior, the President of the United States and the Commander-in Chief. President Johnson at once issued the following proclamation:

Executive Office, July 7.

To Major General Hancock, Commander:

I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby declare that the writ of habeas corpus has been heretofore suspended in such cases as this; and I do hereby especially suspend this writ and direct that you proceed and execute the order heretofore given you upon the judgment of the military commission, and you will give this order in return to this writ.

This was indorsed on the writ and, accompanied by the United States Attorney General Speed, General Hancock presented himself before Justice Wylie and made return to the writ, The execution took place the following day. General Hancock saw that the only hope of Mrs. Surratt lay in the power of her daughter to move the president's heart and he so informed the daughter and gave her every facility in his power to gain acces to the President. So great was his anxiety in the looked-for pardon or reprieve that he placed a line of mounted sentinels from the White house to the place of execution, that the words of grace, if spoken at the last minute, should go surely and swiftly. But no such words were spoken."

Had General Hancock resigned his position to escape the performance of his duty, he would have been denounced as a coward and a traitor. Had he refused to obey the orders of his superiors he would have been court-martialed and dismissed from the service in dis-honor, or perhaps in the excitement of that time, have been sentenced to death. And yet the same partisan press that at that time howled for the execution of an innocent woman, whom trial and sentence was the work of a republican administration, now attempt to avail themselves of the circumstance by starting the cry against General Hancock that "he hung Mrs. Surratt."

Consistency is indeed a jewel that does not sparkle in the crown of republicanism.

Why Leonard Jerome will Vote for Hancock.

The following was written by Leonard Jerome to General Hancock, giving his reasons for supporting him for Presidency.

You, sir, embody the views and sentiments in regard to the great question of the day that we have entertained since the war closed. They are the same that actuated General Grant when he laid down those liberal terms of surrender to General Lee. They are the same that atuced my poor friend Raymond, when he battled so manfully in the committee of Congress against the savage policy of Thad Stevens. I believe that General Grant would support you to-day did not the exigencies of his situation forbid it. And Henry J. Raymond, were he alive, would support you, too, unless the exigencies of the New York Times restrained him. He was compelled at an early day to smother the sentiments he had expressed in the address of the Philadelphia convention, to abandon his career in the legislative halls, our business manager and partner, insisted the paper would be ruined. (I believed that I offered to pay the damages at the time, but that was considered impracticable.) It was a bitter pill, but it had to be swallowed. Thad Stevens had succeeded through a Congress which misrepresented the country in engrafting his policy upon the Republican party. And though a party, as I firmly believe, were disgusted, it was fastened upon them and there was no way of getting to it. Thus for years a vast number of us, good Republicans, have been compelled to be helpless supporters of a policy we believe to be the very worst that could be devised. An opportunity is presented us now, for the first time with any success, to vote in accordance with our convictions, and I am sure we shall do it most joyfully.

At first Garfield's friends were blushing at Arthur's record, but now Arthur's are aghast at Garfield's record.

To be or not to be—to scratch or not to scratch, just now agitates some of the great reformers.

Hancock's name is not down in Oakes Ame's note book. Neither is English's. Ask Garfield.

A republican club of sixty-five members at St. Louis resolved unanimously on Saturday evening last to support Hancock and English.

Since Hancock's nomination the republican congressional committee has great trouble in collecting its assessments from the department clerks. They do not see much prospect of staying on after next fourth of March.

To have been a preacher and to have been expelled from the pulpit for having too tender a regard for the fair sisters of the church is a bad record for a presidential candidate. And to have taken a five thousand dollar fee for getting a fellow a pavement contract isn't bettering it. How are you General Garfield.—Ex.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

The class-day exercises were held on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and consisted of music and addresses. The flag of our country and of the school was given as a memorial presentation. Prof. Waller responded in very appropriate remarks—complimenting the class upon the patriotism they put forth.

The following programme was carried out:

Music - By the Class.

Oration—The Student's Life; B. P. Vannatta.

Oration—History of the Class; A. J. Simmons.

Closing song.

The commencement exercises were held, Thursday morning. A very large audience witnessed the ceremonies. Judge Elwell, President of the Board, in a few words, awarded the diplomas to the class. He spoke of the courage we should feel in having graduated so large a class, (33) it has been equalled by only one in the State. The faculty should feel proud of their success during the past year. The music was of the best class and beautifully rendered. We cannot comment upon the productions of all, but simply say that every part was satisfactorily rendered. We give the programme in full. PUBLIC SALES.

Hester Ann Edson, Executrix of B. F. Cole, deceased, of Benton township, will expose real estate to sale on the premises on Thursday, July 15th, 1880. See advertisement.

W. J. Buckalew offers a house and lot situate on First street in the Town of Bloomsburg, at private sale until July 5th, and if not disposed of by that time will be sold at public sale without reservation.

We are compelled almost daily to explain to persons who come in this office to settle up their subscription why it is that we cannot take $1.50 a year for all the time in arrears. It is simply because those are not our terms. We never agreed to do anything of the kind, and do not propose to. A short time before last October, Brockway & Elwell, the late publishers, reduced the subscription price to $1.50 strictly in advance.

Of course those who did not pay in advance were not entitled to this rate, while those who owed for the paper when the price was two dollars a year, were charged that price. Now the proprietorship has changed, but the accounts remain at the COLUMBIAN office, just as though no change had taken place. Those who owe for the paper more than one year will pay two dollars for the paper, while those who have paid according to our terms get it at $1.50. The price of this paper has always been $2.00 a year. It still remains at that, but a discount of fifty cents is allowed when paid in advance. Please remember that all papers for the present year that are not paid for by October 1st, 1880, will be $2.00 Paper and all other materials still remain at a high figure and we have to pay cash for it, and the low rate is offered for the purpose of getting new subscribers and to break up the long credit system. Some people think that if they pay for the paper once in four or five years, that is sufficient, but it is a great inconvenience to the publishers who need the money every year; hence an inducement is held out to everybody to pay within the year. It is done especially for our own convenience, and therefore after the year has expired, persons not complying with our terms ought not to have the check to ask us to give them the same benefits that others receive who have complied.

Let us illustrate what is of frequent occurrence. A man comes in who owes Brockway & Elwell for three years' subscription. He is told that his bill is six dollars to October 1st, 1879, and $1.50 for the year ending October 1st, 1880. He says that as the price now is only $1.50, he will not pay any more than that for the whole time; and if we do not comply he will pay up and stop the paper. Our reply is that the price up to last October was two dollars a year, and we cannot take less, after sending the paper three years. No fair minded business man would ask us to do any such thing But the impression of many seems to be that the threat to stop the paper will bring us to time, and they will get it at $1.50, no matter when paid. This is a mistake. We can just as well afford to lose the subscriber as to lose a dollar and a half on three years' subscription.

The above are our terms and prices and we shall adhere to them strictly, and we hope no one will ask us to make a special rule for each case. We treat all alike, and have but one rule for everybody. june 25-4w

The Calliepian Literary Society held their reunion in their hall on Wednesday evening.

A slight fire was detected in the wood house of the City Hotel on Tuesday morning. Timely aid saved a probable destruction. How the fire originated no one seems to know.

The Catawissa band passed through town on Saturday evening on their way to Espy to attend a festival. They made some very fine music.

Mr. Samuel Weaver, of Fishingcreek township, lost one or two cows lately. They have been permitted to run the road, and it is supposed they drank some strong liquid used to clean the seats at the St. James church.

The Espy Cornet Band held a festival on the evening of June 26th, which netted them $125. Our citizens join the gentlemen composing the band in expressing their thanks to the Catawissa and Orangeville Cornet Bands for their presence and assure them that their gentlemanly bearing and musical treat will long be remembered and appreciated.

Our much esteemed friend and citizen, Mr. Jared Harrison, of Fishingcreek township, and brother of Judge Harrison, deceased, met with a very serious and perhaps fatal accident on last Saturday morning. While leading a young horse out of the stable, it was frightened by the balling of a cow. Having the full length of the halter strap, the horse sprang forward and at the same time kicked Mr. Harrison on the right side, breaking in and detaching three ribs from the spinal column.

The concert given at Institute Hall on Tuesday evening, under direction of Prof. Niles was very entertaining. "Zampa" performed on three pianos and violin was especially good. "Johnny, the Cripple," vocal duet was well rendered, and was commented upon by the entire audience. One especial feature, which we were pleased to note, was the uniform time and apparent ease of the performers. Prof. Niles has proven himself to be a thorough teacher.

The funeral services of Elmer Hiller, were held in the parlors of the Normal school last Sunday, June 27th. A large number had collected to witness for the last time the remains of a beloved friend and school mate. Rev. Dr. Olin, Presiding Elder of the Wyoming District officiated, assisted by Revs. Yocum and Waller.

Englishmen formerly supposed that American running horses were very inferior to theirs but during the last two years Parole, Wallenstein and other fast ones that were sent from this country to England, have won hundreds of thousands of dollars, for such Americans as the Messrs. THE MILTON FUND.

R. M. Frick, cashier of the Milton National bank, has written as follows to those who contributed to the sufferers' fund: "Our people are getting ready to distribute the aid fund. It is in hands of our best citizens, good business men, who will endeavor to do justice to all. That all will be satisfied I can not believe. The money will go to the poor, and not those who have lost but still have considerable means. It goes to sufferers who have lost all. Our town will be built up again. You would be surprised to see the energy of our people every one, almost, at work preparing to put up new buildings. In a few years we will be better than ever. All our factories are being rebuilt and new life has taken hold of our people. Please accept thanks for your contributions."

At the present time when there are so many worthless liniments in the market, it would be well to inquire which is the best—this will be found in M. B. Roberts' celebrated Embrocation. Last Monday evening, Rev. E. H. Yocum addressed the two Literary Societies of the Normal School in the Opera House. The exercises were opened with song by the members of the societies, entitled "Happy Are We Today" The speaker was then introduced and the audience well treated with a highly edifying discourse on "Students Work in the World." He said, the Normal schools are calculated to furnish the best and most practicable knowledge to the youth in mathematics and the sciences. In short they are model schools cultivating model scholars who in turn are to make a system of model schools which will turn out model scholars.

Also, scholars are superior to other men because they are scholars. The highly tempered steel is superior to the crude ore, so, the polished and scholarly mind is far above the rude and uncultivated one.

The meeting was closed by a song entitled, "We're Wandering Home."

RATIFICATION MEETING.

RECEPTION TO OUR DELEGATE, DAVID LOWENBERG, ON HIS RETURN FROM CINCINNATI.

Pursuant to arrangements made at a meeting of Democrats, held at the Exchange Hotel, there was a large meeting in the Court House yard on Saturday evening to welcome home the delegate to Cincinnati. Mr. Lowenberg arrived on the 7 o'clock train, and was met at the depot by a number of his friends. Shortly afterward the meeting was called to order by Geo. E. Elwell, who nominated Dr. H. W. McReynolds as chairman. The chairman stated the object of the meeting, and on motion, a committee consisting of Geo. E. Elwell, C. W. Miller, M. Hamlin, U. H. Ent and Seth Shoemaker was appointed to wait upon Mr. Lowenberg and escort him to the meeting. This was done, and on their return, Mr Lowenberg was presented to the audience and made a few appropriate remarks, describing the unanimity and good feeling that existed at the convention, and the enthusiasm with which the nominations were received. W. C. McKinney, chairman of the committee of arrangements, then introduced Col. J. G. Freeze, as the speaker of the evening, who addressed the audience upon the issues of the day. He spoke in glowing terms of the character and services of General Hancock, and predicted his certain election next November, and his inauguration in March. After the Colonel had concluded, Capt C. B. Brockway was called for, and spoke feelingly of his old commander He closed by reading a telegram from Gen. Hancock in answer to one congratulating him on his nomination, in which the General returned thanks for the courtesy. The speeches were loudly applauded.

Good music was furnished for the occasion by the Bloom band. Later in the evening, Mr. Lowenberg and Col. Freeze were serenaded by the band.

ORANGEVILLE ITEMS,

Our band has procured a very handsome and substantial wagon and are making extensive preparations for festivals and the coming political meetings.

A prominent citizen and church member of this place, was observed lately living bees on Sunday. The Bible speaks of helping an ox out of the ditch on the Sabbath but says nothing about hiving bees. What verdict shall we pronounce, "Guilty, or not guilty?"

Within the last three months, the introduction, courtship and marriage of two teachers in our Academy have taken place. This is quite romantic in its nature and can best be expressed by Cæsar's saying, Veni, vidi, vici.

The entertainment on last Thursday night was ostensibly for the school, but was it not really a serenade of the newly wedded party?

The Anniversary Address by Rev. Dr. Burrows at the Academy on last Friday was logical, well delivered, and highly appreciated. The exercises of the Senior Class were, no doubt good, and would have been more highly appreciated had they been better heard by the audience. On this occasion three gentlemen graduated. The subject of J. W. Heller's oration was "Parisites." His address teemed with much practical truth and was well received. The subject of M. S Williams' oration was "Men Wield an Influence." His address was flowery and was delivered with the accustomed eloquence of the speaker. The subject of L. P. Stiner's oration was, "The Survival of the Fittest." The speaker in his address evinced much originality, fine sentiment and clear diction. The following students received prizes: Miss Maggie Conner, $5; J. W. Oman, $5; Miss Gertie White and Emma Sharpless each $2 50. The exhibition in the evening was attended and considered good throughout. We were pleased to see it divested of any immoral or vulgar expression. The sentiment of all the pieces was good and the music superb.

THE "WALLER" RAILROAD.

The Wilkes Barre correspondent of the Scranton Times says:

Mr. Adam Dreisbach came on the "H. B. Wright" from Nanticoke on Sunday. He had walked up from Catwissa on the line of the located railroad to be built by the Pennsylvania company on the east side of the river to reach their mines at the lower end of the valley. Mr. D. has been invited to put in proposals for the immediate grading of the road, This route was surveyed some years ago, and a portion of the grading was done in the interest of the P. & R. Co. The Pennsylvania Co. having since become largely interested in purchases of land about Nanticoke, will construct the road in order to render that company independent of the D. L. & W. whose track is used a portion of the way south.

The pleasant home of Dr. Lenker was made quite jubilant on Wednesday evening. It was the occasion of a surprise party. About forty persons attended and a most happy time was passed. The cakes were fine, the surprise genuine.

An interesting praise meeting was recently held in the M. E. church. Short but good addresses were given by the pastor and Messrs. E. D. Leidy, F. B. Hartman and F. P. Harris, of Hamburg. The latter has been visiting here for a short time but has returned to his Prescription Department. Frank is a genial fellow and his many friends will welcome him back, especially the fair sex.

Mr. N. M. Hartman and wife are spending a few days with their relative here. Editing seems to agree with North. At least he has a hale appearance.

ORANGEVILLE, June 30, 1880.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

The regular anniversary exercises of the Academy began Thursday evening, June 24th. There was a reception for the teachers and students. After the refreshments were served several speeches were made by members of the faculty and others. Eight different counties were represented. The evening passed quickly and pleasantly, and at 11:30 all returned to their homes, well satisfied with the evening's enjoyment. At 10 a. m., on Friday there was a re-union of teachers and students, and soon after an address on the subject of education was delivered by Rev. John Burrows from Williamsport. At noon all present were invited down to the school room, that they might partake of the dinner that was provided by the ladies of Orangeville and by other friends of the school. The appearance of the room now presented quite a contrast to its appearance at 9 a. m. Then baskets, both large and small, were scattered all around, but now there were tables covered with food

In the afternoon, after the exercises by the lower classes, the members of the graduating class came forward. Mr. J. W. Heller gave an oration on "Parasesi." Mr. M. S. Williams the salutatory in Latin and Mr. L. P. Stiner, an oration, "Survival of the Fittest," and the valedictory. A prize of $5 in gold was awarded to the best member in each of the three classes. Miss Conner received the prize of Senior class, Mr. Omans for the Middle, and Misses Sharpless and White for the Junior class.

The anniversary closed with an exhibition in the evening, which was well attended and declared to be a success.

BERWICK LETTER.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

The Moss Rose Society gave a very enjoyable entertainment last Saturday evening in the parlors of F. R. Jackson. The exercises consisted of a series of tableaux and the little drama "Alladin's Lamp." This society consists of a small number of boys and girls organized for amusement and social improvement.

On Wednesday, of last week, Mr. M. W. Jackson and the families of his three children, with a few guests, spent the day in the woods, picknicking. A prettier spot along the river than that chosen by this party could scarcely be found. The day was quietly but enjoyably spent.

Rev. Russel, editor of Zions Watch Tower, of Pittsburg, spent Sunday and Monday with us, preaching once in the Presbyterian church and twice in the Baptist. His principal theme was the Millenium and explanations of prophecies concerning it. He preached in a masterly manner, evincing a thorough knowledge of the subject and ability to handle it.

The celebration here on the third of July, is of a parade, military drill, oration, and display of fire works. The parade will begin after the military salute at 1 p. m. There will be four divisions of the Grand Army of the Republic, posts from Bloom, Danville and Berwick. The military, several companies of the 9th Regiment, N. G., and the Wyoming Artillery, five companies, from Scranton, Danville, Lewisburg, Bloom and Berwick. Civic Societies, P. O. S. of A., American Mechanics, Odd Fellows and citizens. There will be bands from Scranton, Bloom, Regimental band, Afton and Berwick. Col. Seely will be Chief Marshal, with Col. Ramsay, Captain Ent, Eli Sherwood and Charles Wolf for aids. F. M. Nichols, Esq., of Wilkes-Barre, will deliver the oration after the parade. The visiting companies will be furnished with dinner free in Reservoir Park at 11 a. m.

The article headed "The Army Worm and How to Fight It," in last week's paper went through part of the edition without credit. It was taken from the Harrisburg Patriot, and when it spoke of this county, Dauphin was meant and not Columbia. There are no signs of the Army worm here yet.

THE GREAT S. S. GATHERING.

The Sunday School Assembly to be held near Oakville, Pa., July 12-17, promises to be an occasion of extraordinary interest. No effort is being spared to make it such. There will be twelve first-class lectures, by men who are recognized "teachers of teachers," twenty sessions for normal instruction, conducted by adepts, which, with the inspiration growing out of contact with the enthusiastic crowd and a week spent in the woods, ought to attract every one interested in Sunday School work within a day's journey A number or the most prominent ministers of the country will participate. On one day Capt. Pratt, of the Carlise Indian School will be present, with some of his dusky pupils. The normal instruction will be under the superintendence of Rev. J. A. Worden, one of the most eminent S. S. workers in the land. For programmes and particulars address Rev. W. M. Frysinger, Corresponding Secretary, Harrisburg, Pa.

We are told that Hancock was "the favorite officer and military exponent of Andrew Johnson's policy." Just so. That policy is briefly sketched in Hancock's "General Order, No 40," which contains these maxims:

The great principles of American liberty are still the lawful inheritance of this people, and exer should be.

The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural right of person and the rights of property must be preserved.

Military interference with elections is prohibited by law, and no soldiers will be allowed to appear at any polling place unless as citizens of the State, they are registered as voters, and then only for the purpose of voting.

It is unfortunate for the country that these doctrines of the statesman and patriot were not permanently enforced. But General Hancock was relevied of his command after he had brought civil order out of anarchy in Louisiana and Texas. Eight long years of radical reconstruction ensued in which the states of the south were subjected with to the oppression of military rule and the rapicity of the carpet-baggers. Peaceful elections of the people were menaced by armed soldiers. Legislative assemblies were turned out of their halls and mountains of debt were heaped upon the shoulders of the people by venal adventurers. The evils which so long afflicted the south grew out of the abandonment of the wise and constitutional policy of General Hancock. This is his highest claim to the confidence of the American people, and its rejection by the republicans is the most signal proof of their unfitness for power.—Patriot.

PILE REMEDY.

Piles—What unceasing tortures arise from Internal Bleeding, External and Itching Piles. The vain endeavors to obtain even partial relief has discouraged the millions who suffer, and they have turned their agony in silence, thinking there was no hope or prospect of a cure. Notwithstanding the total failure of the many remedies heretofore offered for the cure of piles, and the picture of agony resting on the face of those who have tried the various remedies but in vain, yet eagerly sought for and anxiously sought anything that promises the least relief until their courage has long since given place to despondency, let them cheer up, allow the smiles of happiness to illuminate the haggard countenance, and the duties of life will be performed with a degree of happiness and pleasure unknown for weeks, months or years. Briggs' Pile Remedies are the result of unceasing study and experimenting, the result of medical science, and in every respect safe, scientific and reliable for the cure of piles in every form. Briggs' remedies are sold by C. A. Kleim, Bloomsburg, Pa.

VICE PRESIDENCY.

EX-CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM H. ENGLISH OF INDIANNA, COMPLETES THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Hon. William H. English, of Indianapolis, Indianna, who has received the unanimous nomination of the democratic convention for the vice-Presidency, was born at Lexington, in Scott county, in the southern part of Indiana, on August 27 1822. He was the son of the late Major Elisha G. English, a native of Kentucky, who removed to Scott county about 1818. As one of the pioneers of that section he always enjoyed the respect and confidence of the people, and for nearly twenty years was a member of the legislature. Mr. English's father was one of a family of fourteen children, while his mother, Mahala Eustin before her marriage, was one of the seventeen, and still lives at the venerable age of eighty-two.

Mr. English's education was such as could be acquired at the common schools of the neighborhood, and a course of three years study at the South Hanover College. He studied law, and was admitted to practice in the circuit court at the early age of eighteen years. He was subsequently admitted to the Supreme Court of his state and, in the twenty third year of his age, to the highest judicial tribunal in the country, the Supreme Court of the United States.

Several years before he was of age, he was chosen a delegate from Scott county to the democratic state convention at Indianapolis which nominated General Tilghman A. Howard for governor. There was no railroad connection with the capitol at that time, and the roads were in such a deplorable condition that it took him six day's horseback riding to make the round trip. He commenced making speeches in that campaign, and continued in active politics for many years. This was the celebrated "log cabin and hard cider" campaign, which resulted in the election of General Harrison for the Presidency.

Under the Tyler administration, Mr. English was appointed postmaster of Lexington, his native village, then the county seat of Scott county.

In 1843 he was chosen principal clerk of the house of Representatives of his state over several distinguished and worthy competitors. It was at this session that the Hon. Jesse D Bright, then the lieutenant governor and President of the Senate, by casting his vote postponed the regular election of the United States Senator until the next session, which resulted in his own election.

James D. Williams now governor of Indianna, was then, for the first time, a member of the house, and he had several times public mention of the fact that Mr. English then performed the same duties, and most satisfactory, too, with the aid of one assistant, that in these later years half a dozen are paid to perform.

In the Presidential campaign of 1842, Mr. English took an active part in promoting the cause of Mr. Polk, and during the whole of the latter's administration he was an officer in the treasury department at Washington, and a clerk in the United States Senate during the memorable session of 1850 when the compromise measures were adopted. He was principal secretary of the convention that framed the present constitution of Indianna, a member of the house of Representatives from Scott county in 1851, and was elected its Speaker at that session.

With the close of the long session of the legislature of 1851, in which Mr. English had earned golden opinions from men of all parties, he was justly regarded as one of the foremost men of the state, and the democrats of his district with great unanimity solicited him to become their standard bearer in the race for Congress. He was nominated, and in October, 1852, was elected by 488 majority over John D. Ferguson, now deceased, and with whom he was always on equal terms of the warmest personal friendship.

He was an active participant in the canvass which resulted in the election of Franklin Pierce, over General Winfield Scott.

Mr. English entered congress at the beginning of Pierce's administration and remained in the house until the end of Buchanan's term, retiring from public life at the close of the memorable session of 1861. He being particularly prominent as the author of the "English bill," which passed congress after a long and bitter controversy between the political parties of the day. The bill was a compromise, removing an angry issue between the senate and house of representatives, and placing it in the power of the people of Kansas, by a vote, to either prevent or secure admission as a state under the Lecompton constitution, without limit or condition; but this bill, although it commanded the favor of the President and his cabinet, failed to receive the sanction of the house of Representatives. The house; on the other hand, passed a bill as a substitute for that of the senate would not accept or the executive approve. In this state of the proceedings, when the whole country had almost abandoned the hope of a settlement of the disagreement between the houses, and the angry contest was likely to be adjourned for further and protracted agitation before a people already inflamed with sectional animosities, Mr. English took the responsibility of moving to concur in the proposition of the senate, asking for a committee of free conference. The excitement upon the occasion has scarcely ever been equaled in the house of representatives. Upon adopting this motion the vote was 108 to 108, but the speaker voted in the affirmative, and the motion was carried. From this committee Mr. English, reported what is known as the "English bill," which became the law after a struggle of unparalleled bitterness. Under this law the question of admission under the Lecomption constitution was in effect referred back to the people of Kansas, and they voted against it, just as Mr. English and every one else expected they would do. Even Mr. Greeley admitted in his book, that the vote cast on the proposition submitted by the English bill "was, in effect, to reject the Lecomption constitution." This was the result accomplished which Mr. English had contended for from the beginning, and there was no inconsistency in his record upon this subject. On the final vote which admitted Kansas as a state he was still a member and voted for her admission.

In the meantime the split in his political party continued to widen, and the shadows of the great cival war began to be visable to his experienced vision. Mr. English was then a member of the national campaign committee. He was not a delegate to the Charleston convention, but he went to do what he could as a peacemaker, to prevent, if possible, the division of the democratic party. Disgusted with politics, and tired of public life, he declined a renomination for congress in 1860, and entered upon a business career. He was offered the command of a regiment by Gov. O. P. Morton who had long been his personal friend. This he declined, but he remained a firm and consistent advocate of the Union cause throughout the struggle. In the course of an hour's speech which he delivered about the time the war opened, he said "he was opposed to the republican doctrines and should boldly assail Mr. Lincoln's policy whenever he thought it wrong, but as a native of Indianna, thoroughly identified with free state interests, he felt that his allegiance was exclusively due to the state of Indianna and government of the United States, and he should accordingly abide in good faith by their laws, and stand under the old time honored flag. He trusted that the bitter cup of civil war might be passed from our lips, and he would exhaust every possible means of maintaining the peace; but if nothing will do but war, then we must all stand or fall together."

Removing to the city of Indianapolis, Mr. English immediately identified himself with important business movements Chief among these was the organization of the First National bank which was the earliest institution under the new national banking system in Indianna. He was placed at the head of the bank as president, a position he continued to hold until 1877. His management was marked by great judgment and energy, and the bank holds a rank equal to that of any of the financial insitutions of the United States. He also became largely interested in the horse-railway system of the state capitol. As a business man and a bank president, Mr. English, during the whole of his connection with the banking system, gave expression to views that were unequivocal. His knowledge of business, of finances and of the needs of the country was comprehensive. He was opposed to inflantation, and as certainly opposed to extreme and hasty legislation looking to forced resumption. With regard to gold and silver as the standards of value, and to the absolute necessity of ultimate resumption, no man in the country was more pronounced in declaration. The heresy of an irredeemable paper currency found in Mr. English an uncompromising opponent—in fact, he was in accord with everything but the prevailing democratic doctrine on the finances held by the masses of his party in Indianna.

Although Mr. English had been retired from political life for many years, when he resigned the presidency of the Indianapoli, bank, he showed a disposition to return to his former pursuits, and was generally understood to be a candidate for Mr. Morton's seat in the Senate, which fell, however, to the lot of Mr Voorhees. His purpose to re-enter political life, however, was not abandoned, and all through the preliminary contests of the present campaign his friends have been working to secure him such a position as would again make his voice potential in the councils of the Indianna democracy.

Mr. English is above the average height with an erect, well made figure. His head is of good size, with regular features. His forehead is high and broad, and the eyes are small and deep set. He is dignified and gentlemanly in his manners, and has a pleasing address. When in congress, his efforts as a debater were more remarkable for practical common sense than for brilliancy of oratory or the flowers of rhetoric

New rich blood, sending health to every fibre of the system, is rapidly made by Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher."

Sprains.

They are among the common accidents and are more serious and painful than is commonly supposed. A broken leg or arm is often more readily cured than a sprained ankle or wrist. In sprains, the tendons, ligaments, and soft parts around the joints are often stretched and perhaps torn. The first thing to be done is to place the sprained part in the natural position, and to keep it perfectly quiet until the injured parts resume their normal state. To reduce the inflammation, applications are in most cases the best for the first three or four days, and may be applied in the following manner: Dip a good sized piece of flannel into a pail or basin full of hot water or hot poppy fomentation—six poppy heads boiled in one quart of water for about a quarter of an hour;—wring it almost dry and apply it over the sprained part. Then place another piece of flannel (quite dry) over it, in order that the steam and warmth may not escape. The process should be repeated as often as the patient feels that the flannel next to his skin is getting cold—the oftener the better. If, however, the patient find cold or tepid water more comfortable, if the swelling be great, cold water should be applied. The diet should be nourishing, and not tend to constipate the bowels. When the knee is the joint affected, the greatest pain is felt at the inside, and therefore the fomentations should mainly be applied to that part. When the shoulder is sprained, the arm should be kept close to the body by means of a linen roller, which is to be rapped four or five times underneath the elbow, in order to raise the shoulder. Gentle friction with the hands, after the swelling and pain have subsided, will help toward recovery. In severe cases, treatment should be applied under direction of a physician.

STRANGE BUT WONDERFULLY TRUE.

When Dr. Briggs with conscious pride,
And earnest zeal his mind applied,
The science deep to open wide,
Of soothing and of healing.

He took of many substances known
That would heal or still a groan,
And soon composed by skill alone
His miraculous Bunion Balsam.

Tormented with Bunion, Corn or Bruise,
Thousands of sufferers heard the news,
The remedy that meets the views
Is Dr. Briggs' Bunion Balsam.
